List 5 elements that are block, inline-block and inline by default.
Block elements:
- : a generic container for flow content, often used for grouping and styling.
- : represents a paragraph of text.
- <h1>...<h6>: represents heading levels
- <ul>: represents unordered list
- <section>: represents a standalone section of content.

Inline-block elements:
- <input>: used to create interactive controls for web-based forms.
- <button>: represents a clickable button.
- <select>: represents a control that provides a menu of options.
- <textarea>: represents a multi-line plain-text editing control.
- <iframe>: represents an inline frame, used to embed another HTML document into the current one.

Inline elements:
- : represents a hyperlink.
- : a generic inline container for phrasing content, often used for styling small parts of text.
- : indicates importance for its contents
- : indicates emphasis for its contents.
- <img>: embeds an image into the document.